Study in Paris with U.T. this summer, in French or in English!

Earn 6 hours of U.T. credit this summer during a 5-week stay in Paris. You may choose from two different programs, one taught in French, one in English:

I. Finish your language requirement in style: take French 211-212 with all the resources of Paris at your disposal. Professor Sébastien Dubreil, a specialist in second-language acquisition and a native of France, has designed a syllabus that integrates the physical and human environment of the most beautiful city in the world into your language-learning experience. Students who have already completed French 211 may also take this program, earning credit for French 212 and 491 (Study Abroad). For more details about this course, contact Dr. Dubreil (sdubreil@utk.edu).

II. Study in Paris in English: “The French Revolution, a Guided Tour,” taught by Professor Mary McAlpin, a specialist in eighteenth-century French studies. Learn about the Revolution of 1789 while visiting the sites and viewing the objects related to this major world event: Marie-Antoinette’s Hamlet, where she played at being a milkmaid; the cemetery where the headless corpses of the aristocrats were thrown into a common pit; the cafe from which the call to storm the Bastille went out; a working guillotine. Credit is for 6 hours of French 491 (Foreign Study), which can be petitioned to count for courses in other departments, such as the History major requirement for a course in European History, or the Arts & Sciences Upper-Level Distribution requirement (Foreign Studies). Contact Dr. McAlpin (mmcalpin@utk.edu) if you have questions about other types of credit (including credit for the major and minor in French).

For dates, prices, etc., see the program website: https://studyabroad.utk.edu/?go=utkparis

For general questions about the program, contact the program director, Dr. Mary McAlpin (mmcalpin@utk.edu).